PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI.

To The Honorable Fred M. Vinson, Chief Justice, Hugo L. Black, Stanley Reed, Felix Frankfurter, William O. Douglas, Robert H. Jackson, Harold N. Burton, Tom C. Clark and Sherman Minton, Associate Justices,

Your petitioner respectfully shows:

I.

SUMMARY STATEMENT OF MATTER INVOLVED.

The petitioner is a corporation duly incorporated and organized under the laws of, and is a citizen of, the state of Delaware and duly authenticated and authorized to do business in the state of Ohio. The respondents are all citizens and residents of the state of Ohio. The petition in the District Court below shows these facts. The petition of petitioner alleged the amount involved was far in excess of $3,000.00.

This is an original action in equity brought in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio, Eastern Division, by the petitioner herein against the respondents herein as individuals, seeking a restraining order and permanent injunction, restraining respondents individually, from enforcing or attempting to enforce a judgment rendered by the Court of Appeals of Franklin county, Ohio in chancery, in favor of the individual respondents herein, operative on the record thereof against the petitioner herein in Case No. 4239 therein.

This is not a proceeding or action in the District Court of the United States against a state court or an action by appeal or error from a judgment of a state court, or an action to vacate or reverse the judgment of a state court as assumed and acted upon by the District Court, the Court of Appeals and the respondents below.

The petition of petitioner herein, below is set out in full on pp. 2a-11a, R., Appendix.

The basis of the action in the U. S. District Court on the facts alleged in petition was that the judgment in Case No. 4239, was and is opposed to the controlling, fundamental and established principles of equity, is inequitable and unconscionable, and

Rights asserted which are created by the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution, in that said judgment itself operated to deny petitioner its property without due process of law and resulted in denying petitioner the equal protection of the laws and is void, in that the judgment destroyed and deprived the corporation of the use of said quarry and business without compensation (pp. 3a-9a, R., Appendix), the operation and development of a quarry being made lawful by the state being in excess of the power of the court under the 14th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution to render that judgment, and since "all quarries" in Ohio were legalized and made lawful by act of the legislature, sections 898-4-5, and 1177-43, General Code, Ohio, and placed under the jurisdiction of and control of an administrative body with power to adopt necessary rules and regulations to supervise their operation and development, to suffer other quarries to operate in the same region and under same conditions as applied to petitioners' quarry was a denial of the equal protection, application and enforcement of the laws. (See pp. 3a, 8a, 9a, Appendix R and pp. 2, 4, and 5, 11 petition for re-hearing.)

The action in equity in the District Court was filed under sections 1331-1332 (a) (1), Title 28, U. S. C. A.

The petitioner herein also sought a declaratory judgment determining the rights and obligations of this petitioner and respondents under (p. 10a, R., Appendix), said judgment. Such a proceeding being authorized by Title 28, U. S. C. A., Ch. 151, Section 2201, p. 227, Part VI and Rule 57. Federal Rules Civil Procedure Title 28, U. S. C. A., p. 246.

It was alleged in the petition of the petitioner in the District Court that respondents had filed a petition in the Court of Common Pleas, Franklin county, Ohio (pp. 3a-5a, Appendix R.) alleging that the defendent (which was an Ohio Corporation bearing the same name as your petitioner, which succeeded to all the rights, property, franchises and obligations of the Ohio Corporation by transfer duly affected under the laws of Ohio), proposed to establish a quarry on the west side of the Scioto river and about two (2) miles north of a small village called Dublin, that the respondents herein owned land on the east side of the river, that some of the land had houses on them, and that if said quarry was established that the quarrying for stone, and the blasting and crushing of stone "will cause" the walls to be severely damaged that the noise "will be" intolerable and "will cause" the houses of plaintiffs, respondents herein to be unsafe for occupancy, "will materially" impair the value of their property, "will cause" dust and dirt to settle on their property, and "will make" their premises undesirable and unfit for habitation; and dust and dirt from blasting and crushing "will be" injurious to the health of occupants, that the plaintiffs-respondents herein "will suffer" permanent and irreparable damage that plaintiffs therein do not have an adequate remedy at law, and prayed for permanent injunction restraining defendent quarry corporation, "from establishing, maintaining or operating a stone quarry" and from "blasting, crushing stone in any manner" on such premises. Petitioner alleged said quarry was not operating or established when respondent's petition was filed. (P. g-a, R., Appendix.)

That when the case came on for trial in the state court after answer with general denial was filed, plaintiffs therein over objections of defendant filed by leave of court, what was called a supplemental petition—containing no new allegations of material facts, merely alleged that defendant corporation had started operation and renewed the prayer contained in original petition (see pp. 3a-6a, Appendix, R.) No summons was issued on alleged supplemental petition.

Petitioner herein alleged in its petition in the U. S. District Court that nothing was alleged in said respondents petition in the state court about any nuisance, or that said quarry was operated in a negligent or unlawful manner or that any injury or damage was suffered by or inflicted upon any individual plaintiff therein, or on his or her property, by any unlawful or negligent act or otherwise (see pp. 5a, 9a, Appendix R), or that any legal rights of said respondents had been invaded or injured.

The judgment of the Court of Appeals, Franklin county, Ohio, merely found that the plaintiffs-respondents herein were entitled to the relief prayed for, to wit: an injunction permanently restraining the quarry corporation from establishing, maintaining or operating the proposed quarry, or from blasting, crushing or quarrying stone. There was no finding of any fact that any legal right of respondents had been invaded, or any legal injury inflicted on any individual or individual's property in any manner whatever (pp. 6a-7a, R., Appendix.)

The allegations of respondents' petition in the state court is set out on pp. 3a to 6a, R., Appendix; the judgment of the Ohio Court of Appeals in Chancery is set out on pp. 6a-7a, R., Appendix. The Supreme Court of Ohio denied motion to certify and the judgment of the Court of Appeals of Franklin county, Ohio, became the final judgment (p. 7a, R., Appendix).

Petitioner alleged in its petition (pp. 8a, 9a, R. Appendix) that said proposed quarry was located in a region which has been known as a quarry region for over one hundred years, and that it was declared a lawful business under the laws of the state of Ohio; that it had been licensed by the state for years to manufacture and sell agricultural meal, that other quarries have been operating in same region for over 60 years without interference.

The petitioner alleged it had no adequate remedy at law, that irreparable damage had and would continue to result unless respondents were restrained as prayed for.

The respondents filed a motion presumably under Rule 12 (b) of the rules of the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals to dismiss said action alleging as grounds, 1, lack of jurisdiction of the subject matter by the District Court; 2, that petition fails to state a claim against defendants upon which relief can be granted; 3, that the issue raised is res judicata (p. 11a, R., Appendix). The respondents admitted the material allegations of the petition. Rule 12 (b) does not provide for a defense of res judicata by motion, that is provided by Rule 8, paragraph (c) as an affirmative defense.

The matter was heard before Justice Frank A. Picard by substitution and his opinion rendered July 18, 1952 (p. 12a, R., Appendix) and the final order thereon filed, August 11, 1952 (p. 17a, R., Appendix) sustaining said motion on all grounds and dismissing said action with prejudice, denying petitioner the right to amend—to all of which petitioner excepted.

Notice of appeal to the Court of Appeals for the Sixth (6th) Circuit was filed August 29, 1952 and copy served on attorney for the defendants-respondents herein. Bond on appeal was filed August 29, 1952 (pp. 1a and 2a, R., Appendix).

Transcript of the docket and journal entries with the original papers were filed and docketed as Case No. 11732 in the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit on the eighth day of October, 1952. The brief containing the questions involved as required by Rule 21a of the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit was filed and docketed November 7, 1952. An appendix containing copies of the original papers in the District Court was filed, to wit: the petition of petitioners, the motion of respondents to dismiss the proceedings, the opinion of the Court of Appeals and final order sustaining the motion of respondents to dismiss the petition of the plaintiff (pp. 1a-17a, inclusive, R., Appendix).

An order was entered (p. 19, R.) by the Court of Appeals April 15, 1953, sustaining the order of District Court on the ground only of "res adjudicata" and citing two cases, one a federal case and another an Ohio case (which petitioner contended in the petition for rehearing, page 4, paragraph 8, have no application whatsoever to the issue of res adjudicata as applied to the petition of petitioner in this case and affirming said order but failing or neglecting to pass upon the other two grounds set out in the order of the District Court August 11, 1952 (p. 17a—R., Appendix) to wit:

1. That plaintiff is not the real party in interest. That plaintiff is bound by the decree of the state court, the jurisdiction of which has already attached and accordingly this court has no jurisdiction over the subject matter.

2. That complaint fails to state a claim against the defendants upon which relief can be granted. That complaint is dismissed without leave to amend.

A petition for rehearing as provided by Rule 28, Rules of the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals, was filed the twenty-ninth day of May, 1953 (p. 21, R., Appendix).

The petition for a rehearing set up the contention that the Court of Appeals treated this proceeding in the District Court as the District Court did, as an appeal and error proceeding from a state court, and as a proceeding to vacate and reverse a judgment of a state court.

The court's attention was called to the fact that this was an original proceeding in equity between individuals to enjoin the enforcement of a state judgment wherein facts were alleged which rendered the judgment inequitable and unconscionable and opposed to the controlling, established principles of equity, and

That the judgment violated rights created by the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution, rendering the state judgment void and unenforceable.

That under the petition of this petitioner in the District Court and under the Constitution, law and applicable authorities of the United States Supreme Court and the United States Court of Appeals, jurisdiction was established in the District Court, that the District Court was mandatorily required to take jurisdiction and grant a hearing, that on a motion to dismiss as filed by the respondents, that the court was confined to allegations of fact set forth in the petition and that the claim of res judicata was not available under that motion, that to deny petitioner a hearing was a violation of both the 14th Amendment and of the 5th Amendment to the United States Constitution.

That the action and order of the Court of Appeals was in direct conflict with the applicable controlling decisions of the United States Supreme Court and United States Courts of Appeals.

The questions presented to the Court of Appeals on the decision and order of the District Court on the motion of respondents to petition of petitioner for decision on the appeal were,

1. Did the District Court have jurisdiction of the subject matter of the petition under motion of respondents?

2. Did petition fail to state a claim upon which relief can be granted?

3. Was the issue raised by petition and motion res judicata?

The District Court answered all of these questions in the affirmative, except the first, and District Court ruled the

BLEED THROUGH POOR COPY

District Court did not have jurisdiction of the subject matter of the petition in the federal court, because petitioner was bound by the decree of the state court.

The Court of Appeals ignored the first two questions and affirmed the order and judgment of the District Court on the third question only (p. 19, R.) and cited two cases, one of which was federal and one Ohio, which petitioner contended were wholly inapplicable, according to the reports of those cases.

An order was entered on the eighth day of June, 1953 (p. 35, R.), denying said petition.

No opinion was rendered by the Circuit Court of Appeals on either order, except that embraced in said orders.

II.

JURISDICTIONAL STATEMENT.

The statutory provision which petitioner believes sustains the jurisdiction of this court is Section 1254, Title 28, U. S. C., paragraph (1).

The date of the order and judgment in the Court of Appeals is June 8, 1953 (p. 35, R.), denying the petition of petitioner, for rehearing of the order entered April 15, 1953 (p. 17, R.), which was filed May 29, 1953.

This order denying petition for rehearing was the final order.

Nat. Lab. R. Bd. v. MacKay Rad. & Tel. Co., 304 U. S., 333, 82 L. Ed., 1381.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED.

Whether the Court of Appeals erred in affirming the order and judgment of the District Court in dismissing the petition of plaintiff-petitioner in the District Court on the sole ground of res adjudicata.

2.

Whether the Circuit Court of Appeals erred in affirming the judgment and order of the District Court which held (p. 17A, R., Appendix)

a. That "the plaintiff is not the real party in interest and the plaintiff is bound by the decree of the state court, jurisdiction of which has already attached and accordingly this court has no jurisdiction over the subject matter".

Thereby treating this case as a proceeding on appeal and error from a state court instead of an original proceeding in equity—in the United States court between individuals to enjoin the enforcement by such individuals of a state judgment which plaintiff contended under facts alleged was inequitable and unconscionable and involved rights set up under the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution.

b. That the complaint of plaintiff in the District Court fails to state a claim against defendants upon which relief can be granted.

c. That the issue raised is res adjudicata.

d. That the petition is dismissed with prejudice, without leave to amend.

3.

Whether the Court of Appeals erred in affirming the judgment and order of the District Court and denying the petitioner-plaintiff a hearing on the merits thereby denying due process of law and the equal protection of the laws contrary to the 14th and 5th Amendments to the United States Constitution.

4.

Under Act of Congress Title 28, U. S. C., p. 227, Chap. 151, Section 2201, part VI, Rule 57, Fed. Rules Civil Procedure, Title 28, p. 246, the petitioner was granted the right to file an action for a declaratory judgment in a matter which under the petitioner's petition involved a right asserted under the United States Constitution, rendering the state judgment void and involving a right under the fixed, controlling principles of equity, which rendered enforcement of the state judgment by the individual respondents inequitable and unconscionable and unenforceable under the 14th and 5th Amendments to the Constitution of the United States and under the applicable controlling decisions and rules of the United States Supreme Court and the United States Court of Appeals. The question is whether the Court of Appeals erred in affirming the order and judgment of the Court of Appeals and denying the right of petitioner to invoke the jurisdiction of the District Court to hear and determine such matter.

It was alleged in plaintiff's petition in the District Court (p. 5-a, 9-a and 8-a, R., Appendix), that the operation and development of the quarry, referred to in the petition in the District Court, was made lawful by the state of Ohio. No injury to the legal rights of any individual respondent or his or her property was alleged against petitioner in the state court or involved in the finding or judgment in the state court. The operation and development of said quarry was permanently enjoined by the judgment in the state court without any compensation adjudged or paid therefor.

Did the Court of Appeals err in affirming the order and judgment of the District Court and thereby deny the petitioner-plaintiff the equal protection of the laws and due process of law contrary to the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution?

Whether the Court of Appeals is and was confined to the allegations set forth in the petition of plaintiff filed in the District Court in considering and determining whether the District Court erred in its judgment and order on the motion of defendants to the petition of the plaintiff in the District Court and,

Did the Court of Appeals err in not confining itself to the allegations of such petition?

REASONS RELIED ON FOR ALLOWANCE OF THE WRIT.

This is an original action in equity, between citizens of different states. The controversy involves more than $3,000.00;

The United States Court of Appeals rendered a decision affirming the judgment and order of the District Court which is probably in conflict with the applicable controlling decisions of this court in this, to wit:

Petitioner contends this case involves a substantial federal question. The decisions of this court have declared that where federal jurisdiction exists, when an action in equity is filed in the federal courts between individuals seeking to enjoin the enforcement of a state judgment which has become final, whether valid or void, but facts are alleged which it is contended render such judgment inequitable and unconscionable under the controlling established principles of equity, and it is contended that rights are asserted as created by the United States Constitution which have been violated by the state judgment which render such judgment void under the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution.

This court has declared under such a state of facts that such action is a new and original proceeding in the federal courts and is not an attack upon the state court, or a proceeding on appeal or error from the state court to vacate or set aside the state judgment but a new case and the federal court must take jurisdiction. The Court of Appeals below treated this action as a proceeding as an appeal or error from the state court as revealed by its orders entered p. 19 and 35, R., and its action and decision is in conflict with Smythe v. Ames, 169 U. S., 466, 478, 516, 518, 520, 522; 42 L. Ed., 819-838, 839. Hart v. Keith, etc., 262 U. S., 271, 273; 67 L. Ed., 977, 979. Swafford v. Templeton, 185 U. S., 482, 493, 494; 46 L. Ed., 1005, 1008, wherein it was declared it was error to dismiss a petition, such as filed in the District Court in this case on a motion of respondent.

The decision and action of the Court of Appeals in affirming the order and judgment of the District Court is in conflict with the controlling decisions of this court as declared in Wells Fargo v. Taylor, 254 U. S., 175, 183, 184; 65 L. Ed., 205, 211, 212. Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S., 589, 35 L. Ed., 870; Ex parte Simon, 208 U. S., 141, 52 L. Ed., 429; Simon v. Southern Ry. Co., 236 U. S., 115, 122, 124, 125, 59

L. Ed., 492; Pub. Serv. Co. v. Cosboy, 250 U. S., 153, 160; 63 L. Ed., 908; Nat. Surety Co. v. State Bank, 120 Fed., 593.

These cases declared in substance "Where the elements of federal and equity jurisdiction are present * * * under facts as alleged in petitioner's petition herein * * * the federal courts have jurisdiction to grant the injunction sought."

3.

The Court of Appeals' decision in affirming the order of the District Court dismissing the action and petition of petitioner, on the grounds of res judicata and ignoring the question of jurisdiction, this being an original case in equity between individual citizens residing in different states involving more than $3,000.00 and involving a controversy wherein is set up rights guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution is in conflict with federal decisions of various courts as follows, Landan v. Publ. Utility Co., 234 Fed., 152, 156. This decision was by Justice Sanborn, cir. ct. judge. Consold, Wyoming v. Champion Mfg. Co., Cir. Ct., N. D. Calif., 62 Fed., 945, 949, 950.

The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in affirming the order and judgment of the District Court in sustaining the motion of respondents to dismiss the petition of petitioner, is in conflict with the decisions of both this court and the other Courts of Appeals in this, to wit:

The order and judgment of the Court of Appeals, this being an original case in equity between individual citizens of different states, involving a right set up, created by the United States Constitution, reveals on its face that the Court of Appeals went outside of the allegation of the petition to ascertain facts and reasons, instead of being confined to the allegations of the petition, in order to justify the ruling as to the issue of res judicata and ignore the question of jurisdiction.

Stewart v. Masterson, 131 U. S., 151, 157, 33 S. Ed., 114;
McArthur v. Porters Lessee, 1 Peters, 626, 7 L. Ed., 290;
Cooper v. Connar, 107 Fed. Ind., 207-209. U. S. Ct. Appeals, Dist. Columbia;
In re Interstate Oil Corp., 63 Fed. 2d, 674, 676.

5.

The decision and order of the Court of Appeals in affirming the order and judgment of the District Court sustaining motion of respondents to dismiss action and petition of petitioner in the District Court and ignoring the action and prayer of petitioner for a declaratory judgment filed under an Act of Congress, and ignoring the question of jurisdiction thus conferred by Act of Congress, was and is in conflict with the decisions of the Circuit Courts of Appeals in the following decisions:

Market v. Swift Co., 187 Fed. 2d, 104, Cir. Ct. App., N. Y. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Prejci, 123 Fed. 2d, 594. This case involved the Declaratory Judgment Act of Congress and declared the right therein created was jurisdictional.

It appears from the summary statement above and from the petition of petitioner filed in the District Court, the quarrying operations of all quarries was made legal by statute in the state of Ohio.

That the judgment, against the enforcement of which by the individual respondents, the petition sought an injunction, merely restrained the lawful operation of said quarry, without any finding of any invasion or injury to the legal rights of any respondent or to his or her property, without any compensation, paid or adjudged therefor.

COPY BOUND TOO CLOSE IN CENTER

Therefore, the order and judgment of the Court of Appeals in affirming the order and judgment of the Court of Appeals resulting in denying petitioner a hearing on such petition and denying the relief sought by the petitioner under rights asserted under the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution was and is in conflict with the applicable decisions of this court as follows:

Mosher v. Phoenix, 287 U. S., 29, 32, 77 L. Ed., 148, 150;

Cuyahoga R. R. v. Akron, 240 U. S., 462, 463, 464, 60 L. Ed., 743, 744;

Regan v. Farmers L. and Trust Co., 154, U. S. 362, 397-399, 38 L. Ed., 1014;

Chicago v. Chicago, 166 U. S., 226, 233-235, 41 L. Ed. 979, 983-984;

Near v. Nimes, ex rel., 283 U. S., 697, 707-711; 718-721, 75 L. Ed., 1357, 1363.

Wherefore, your petitioner prays that a writ of certiorari issue under the seal of this court, directed to the United States Court of Appeals, for the Sixth Circuit, commanding said court to certify and send to this court, a full and complete transcript of the record and of the proceedings of the Circuit Court of Appeals had in the case numbered and entitled on its docket, No. 11732, J. & L. Snouffer, Inc., Appellant v. Wilbur B. Adams et al., Appellees, to the end, that this cause may be reviewed and determined by this court as provided for by the statutes of the United States; and that the orders and judgment herein of said United States Circuit Court of Appeals be reversed by this court and for such further relief as may appear equitable, necessary and proper to this court on the record.

Statement 1
Argument 4
I. There was no jurisdiction in the District Court under petitioner's complaint over the subject matter 4
A. The filing of the supplemental petition in the Common Pleas Court 7
B. The argument that the judgment of the Court of Appeals is inequitable, unconscionable and absolutely void as prohibited by the XIV Amendment to the Constitution of the United States 8
C. The allegation that property in question is located in a quarrying region 10
D. The attempt to raise a federal constitutional question 11
II. Complaint below failed to state a claim against defendants upon which relief can be granted 13
A. The injunction in force against Lillian E. Snouffer and J. & L. Snouffer, Inc., an Ohio corporation, issued by the Court of Appeals of Franklin county is valid against this plaintiff 13
B. The jurisdiction of the Court of Appeals of Franklin county having already attached is a continuing jurisdiction and the District Court was right in not taking jurisdiction of the subject matter of this action 15

III. The issue, raised by the complaint and motion of defendants below, was res judicata entitling defendants-appellees to a dismissal of the action on that ground 18
A. All relevant facts being shown by the complaint, res judicata was property raised by motion 18

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1953.

No. 324.

J. & L. SNOUFFER, INC.,
Petitioner,

vs.

WILBUR B. ADAMS, ET AL.,
Respondents.

BRIEF OF RESPONDENTS.

STATEMENT.

All relevant facts are set forth in the bill of complaint filed in the District Court (Record, pages 2a-11a).

Material allegations of fact were, of course, admitted for purposes of defendant's motion to dismiss, but conclusions of law were not. These facts were well stated by the opinion of the District Court granting defendant's motion to dismiss (Record, pages 12-a-17a). They may be summarized as follows:

In May, 1947, respondents herein brought action in the Common Pleas Court of Franklin county, Ohio, to enjoin Lillian E. Snouffer and her Ohio lessee corporation, J. & L. Snouffer, Inc., from establishing a stone quarry on her land.

At the time of the trial, June, 1948, Lillian E. Snouffer and her lessee Ohio corporation having then started the quarrying of stone on the said premises, a supplemental petition was filed as authorized by the Ohio statute as will be hereinafter shown, praying the defendants be enjoined from carrying on such activities.

Such Common Pleas Court in December, 1948, permanently enjoined the defendants from establishing, maintaining or operating a stone quarry on said premises, and from blasting, crushing or quarrying stone thereon.

In July, 1949, the Court of Appeals of Franklin county, Ohio, after hearing the case de novo likewise so enjoined Lillian E. Snouffer and her lessee corporation.

In December, 1949, the Supreme Court of Ohio refused to grant a motion to certify the record to that court for review.

In November, 1950, Lillian E. Snouffer and her lessee corporation filed a motion in the Court of Appeals of Franklin county, Ohio, to vacate, suspend or modify the previous judgment of said court of July, 1949, which was denied by said Court of Appeals of Franklin county, Ohio, in June 1951. This action of said Court of Appeals was not carried to the Supreme Court of Ohio by motion to certify or otherwise.

The bill of complaint filed in the District Court states that the land in question where the state courts had enjoined the operation of a stone quarry is still owned by Lillian E. Snouffer and is now under lease to a new Delaware corporation of the same name as her Ohio corporation (Record, page 2a).

The transcript of record filed in this court on page 11a does not show who verified the complaint filed in the District Court but merely states that the same was "duly verified". The complaint was verified by the president of this new lessee Delaware corporation, this same Lillian E. Snouffer, owner of the land in question, as noted in the opinion of the District Court (Record, page 13a).

There is no allegation in the bill of complaint of fraud in any of this litigation in the state courts, nor has any claim of fraud been made at any time.

ARGUMENT.

I.

THERE WAS NO JURISDICTION IN THE DISTRICT COURT UNDER PETITIONER'S COMPLAINT OVER THE SUBJECT MATTER.

It is established that federal jurisdiction cannot be conferred by creating a new successor corporation giving diversity of citizenship when it appears on the record, as in the case at bar, that such successor corporation is created merely to give diversity of citizenship for either a temporary or special purpose and the power remains to annul this diversity as soon as such purpose is served. Under these circumstances such successor corporation is not the real party in interest.

The Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in Amalgamated Clothing Workers v. Curlee Clothing Co., 19 F. 2d, 439, said:

> "The real question is one of law and is whether the Delaware corporation was, under these circumstances, so dependent and free as to this property and business that it can appear in a federal court as a litigant * * *. The motive with which this is done is not always controlling. The test is whether it is done with the purpose and in such a manner as to work a fraud upon the federal court by creating a temporary and, in reality, a spurious citizenship. Where the purpose is merely to create diversity of citizenship for such temporary or special purpose and where the power remains to annul this diversity as soon as it has served such purpose, there is such fraud." (Emphasis ours.)

There can be no question but that all facts were before the District Court to show that the power remained in the real party in interest, the owner of this property to annul the diversity of citizenship created for the purpose of this litigation as soon as it has served her purpose. The complaint shows that this owner, Lillian E. Snouffer, was the owner of the property at the time that litigation began in the Common Pleas Court of Franklin county, Ohio, and that she and her lessee corporation were enjoined by the Common Pleas Court and the Court of Appeals from conducting stone quarrying operations on this property. The bill of complaint shows that all interest of the Ohio lessee corporation was then transferred to the new Delaware lessee corporation of the same name, and the bill is verified by the president of the new Delaware lessee corporation, this same Lillian E. Snouffer.

The District Court in its opinion noted the fact which was before the court that "the same individuals owned the Delaware corporation that had formerly owned the Ohio corporation; further that the sole and only reason for the transfer was to make it possible for a suit to be brought in federal court." (Record, page 13a.)

The case of Amalgamated Clothing Workers v. Curlee Clothing Company, supra, was cited with approval by the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in Tower Realty Co. v. City of East Detroit, Michigan, 185 Fed. 2d, 590, and again in Tower Realty, Inc. v. City of East Detroit, 196 Fed. 2d, 710.

In Lehigh Mining & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S., 327, this court had under consideration facts which were closely analogous to those at bar. A corporation was organized in another state than that in which the action was brought by the stockholders and officers of a corporation of the latter state, and land was conveyed to the former by the latter corporation, without consideration, and only for the purpose of giving jurisdiction to the United States Circuit Court of an action to recover land on the ground of the diverse citizenship of the parties. The arrangement was held to be collusive and a fraud upon the court, and the case was dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

In the course of its opinion this court said at pages 338, 339:

> "It is clear that the record justifies the assumption that there was no valuable consideration for the conveyance to the Pennsylvania corporation. Why should a valuable consideration have passed at all, when the stockholders of the grantor corporation were, at the time of the conveyance, the same individuals? Could it be expected that those stockholders, acting as one body, under the name of the Virginia Coal & Iron Company, would take money out of one pocket for the purpose of putting it into another pocket which they had and used only while acting under the name of the Lehigh Mining & Manufacturing Company? A valuable consideration cannot be presumed merely because the agreed statement of facts recites that the Virginia corporation executed and delivered a deed of 'bargain and sale' conveying all its right, title, and interest to the Pennsylvania corporation. In view of the admitted facts, that recital must be taken as meaning nothing more than that the deed was, in form, one of bargain and sale, conveying the technical legal title. The deed cannot be regarded even as a deed of gift, unless we suppose that a body of stockholders, acting under one corporate name, solemnly made a gift of property to themselves acting under another corporate name. When it is remembered that the plaintiff in error stipulates that all that was done had for its sole object to create a case cognizable in the federal court, which would otherwise have been cognizable only in a court of Virginia, it is not difficult to understand why the agreed statement of facts failed to state, in terms, that a valuable consideration was paid by the grantee corporation.
> The arrangement by which, without any valuable consideration, the stockholders of the Virginia corporation organized a Pennsylvania corporation and > conveyed these lands to the new corporation for the express purpose—and no other purpose is stated or suggested—of creating a case for the federal court, must be regarded as a mere device to give jurisdiction to a Circuit Court of the United States and as being, in law, a fraud upon that court, as well as a wrong to the defendants. Such a device cannot receive our sanction. The court below properly declined to take cognizance of the case."

If the record in this case justified the assumption that there was no valuable consideration for the conveyance of the land to the Pennsylvania corporation, the complaint here even more strongly justifies such assumption. In acquiring the right as lessee to quarry stone on this property, the Ohio corporation of the same name was transferring a thing of no value at all to it, since it had been permanently enjoined from carrying on such operations. Whatever the new Delaware corporation paid to the Ohio corporation in acquiring the right as lessee to quarry stone on this property is entirely immaterial since, in view of the substantially identical ownership of both corporations, the payment of any consideration only amounted to taking money out of one pocket and putting it into another.

Even without the admissions of counsel in open court as to stock ownership of these two lessee corporations, as noted by Judge Picard in his opinion (Record, p. 13a), the complaint on its face discloses that the new Delaware corporation is not the real party in interest.

A. The Filing of the Supplemental Petition in the Common Pleas Court.

Petitioner in its complaint alleges that "no summons was issued on said supplemental petition" which was filed as alleged on June 1, 1948, "at the time of the opening of the trial in this cause". This supplemental petition as shown by the complaint alleged that since the filing of the original petition seeking to enjoin a threatened nuisance, the defendants had started quarrying stone on these premises by blasting and crushing operations.

Where facts material to a case have occurred since the filing of an original petition, as was the situation here, the law of Ohio expressly authorizes the filing of a supplemental petition, and does not require that summons be issued on such supplemental petition. Section 11368 of the General Code of Ohio provides:

> "On such terms as to costs as the court, or a judge thereof, prescribes, either party may be allowed to file a supplemental petition, answer or reply, alleging facts material to the case which occurred since the filing of the former petition, answer or reply. Reasonable notice of the application therefor must be given when the court or judge so requires."

The complaint shows no irregularity in the filing of this supplemental petition, nor did the state Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court find any such irregularity.

B. The Argument That the Judgment of the Court of Appeals is Inequitable, Unconscionable and Absolutely Void as Prohibited by the XIV Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Petitioner argues that since the quarrying of stone is a lawful business, not a nuisance per se, and recognized and regulated by the state, equity does not have the power or jurisdiction to enjoin such an operation without compensation therefor, without violating the XIV Amendment; it is argued that the courts have no power to prohibit such business without compensation—without rendering such decree or judgment void under the United States Constitution.

BLEED THROUGH POOR COPY

We are not here concerned with any attempt on the part of any court to prohibit the business of stone quarrying, but only a decree enjoining the quarrying of stone in this particular residential neighborhood. The courts of Ohio and every other state in the Union have consistently enjoined the conduct of certain businesses in residential neighborhoods which are not nuisance per se and which are regulated by the state. It has consistently been recognized that a business not a nuisance per se may become such when conducted in a residential neighborhood. In Dagenhart v. Harford, 59 O. A., 552, the second syllabus is as follows:

> "2. A reviewing court will overrule a motion to modify a continuing injunction on the ground that a municipal zoning ordinance, in effect at the time the decree was entered and forbidding the maintenance of a funeral home in a residence district, had been modified, where the court in the original case found as a matter of law that the operation of a funeral home in close proximity to plaintiff's residence was a nuisance."

It is interesting to note that the business of maintaining a funeral home, like the business of embalming, is likewise a lawful business, recognized, regulated and licensed by the state; Sections 1335-1, et seq., General Code of Ohio. This case is a complete answer to the argument that because of the state regulating the operation of stone quarries, the courts are without jurisdiction to enjoin such operations in residential neighborhoods.

See also Landeman v. Lamb Construction Company, 297 S. W., 184, where the operation of a stone quarry in a residential neighborhood was enjoined. In Fagan v. Silver, 188 Pac., 900, the Supreme Court of Montana unanimously sustained the lower court in enjoining the operation of a stone quarry. In Jones v. Kelly Trust Co., 18 S. W. (2d),

COPY BOUND TOO CLOSE IN CENTER

356, the Supreme Court of Arkansas recognized that the operation of a stone quarry and rock crusher might be lawful in one location but unlawful and a nuisance in another locality. A further citation of authorities in support of this fundamental and elemental rule should not be necessary.

C. The Allegation that Property in Question is Located in a Quarrying Region.

Presumably the allegations in the complaint and statements in plaintiff's memorandum on this point are made to support the argument that the decree enjoining the operation of plaintiff's stone quarry in this residential neighborhood is inequitable and unconscionable. As a matter of fact, these allegations disclose the propriety of the decree.

Courts are more reluctant to grant an injunction where the nuisance consists of the operation of a business which must be conducted at a fixed place, than they are to enjoin a nuisance caused by a factory and business which may be removed to another location. Brede v. Minn. Crushed Stone Co., 6 A. L. R., 1092. If this same quality of limestone were only found on plaintiff's property it is doubtful if these quarrying operations would have been enjoined, or if the original action would ever have been brought. But, as alleged by plaintiff, this is a quarrying region and no showing could accordingly be made of any necessity for quarrying stone in this particular residential neighborhood.

Plaintiff's own allegations on this point support the propriety and validity of the injunction decree rather than its inequity and invalidity.

BLEED THROUGH POOR COPY

D. The Attempt to Raise a Federal Constitutional Question.

Plaintiff alleges that the enforcement of the injunction denies the plaintiff due process of law and equal protection of the laws. Even if this were an appeal from the state judgment to the Supreme Court of the United States, it would be necessary to show that the constitutional question had been timely raised. In Herndon v. Georgia, 295 U. S. 441, this court held that an attempt to raise a federal question in a state court after judgment, upon a petition for rehearing, does not furnish a basis for review by this court unless the state court actually entertains the question and decides it. Nor could it be contended if this were an appeal of the state action that this case falls within the exception to the above rule that the federal question first arose from the unanticipated act of the state court in granting a permanent injunction. The decree complained of was in accordance with the prayer of the petition in the trial court and on its face precludes any assumption of not being anticipated.

Since even in an attempt to review the decree in injunction there is no showing of any federal constitutional question having been timely raised, a fortiori in this attempt to re-litigate the case on the same facts in the district court the allegation of deprivation of due process and equal protection was clearly of no avail, and could not serve to confer jurisdiction over the subject matter.

This question of violation of the XIV Amendment might properly have been litigated in this case in the state court. It is conclusively settled in that litigation. The first branch of the syllabus in Quinn, Aud., et al. v. State, ex rel., 118 O. S., 48, is pertinent:

> "1. Material facts or questions which were in issue in a former suit and were there judicially determined by a court of competent jurisdiction are conclusively > settled by the judgment therein so far as concerns the parties to that action and persons in privity with them and cannot be again litigated in any future action between the same parties or privies, and this rule also applies not only to what was determined but also as to every other question which might properly have been litigated in the case. (Hixon v. Ogg, 53 Ohio St., 361, 52 N. E., 32, and Strangward v. American Brass Bedstead Co., 82 Ohio St., 121, 91 N. E., 988, followed and approved.)

In the opinion the Ohio Supreme Court, speaking through Robert H. Day, J., at pp. 55 and 56, quoted the following language of this court in So. Pac. Rd. C. v. United States, 168 U. S., 1, at page 48 as follows:

> "The general principle announced in numerous cases is that a right, question or fact distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, as a ground of recovery, cannot be disputed in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies; and even if the second suit is for a different cause of action, the right, question or fact once so determined must, as between the same parties or their privies, be taken as conclusively established, so long as the judgment in the first suit remains unmodified. This general rule is demanded by the very object for which civil courts have been established, which is to secure the peace and repose of society by the settlement of matters capable of judicial determination. Its enforcement is essential to the maintenance of social order; for, the aid of judicial tribunals would not be invoked for the vindication of rights of persons and property, if, as between parties and their privies, conclusiveness did not attend the judgments of such tribunals in respect of all matters properly put in issue and actually determined by them."

In view of the fact that the plaintiff corporation was not the real party in interest in the court below and such court had no jurisdiction over the subject matter, the question of whether or not the decree of the Court of Appeals of Franklin county, Ohio, is violative of any constitutional right may not be considered. The complaint shows on its face privity in interest between the new Delaware corporation and the parties to the state case. The bill of complaint discloses the fact that the owner and prior lessee of this property did not file a motion to certify in the Supreme Court of Ohio after the Court of Appeals denied the motion to vacate, suspend or modify the judgment previously rendered by such court. Under such circumstances, even the real parties in interest not having exhausted their state remedies could not now raise a constitutional question. Ex Parte Hawk, 321 U. S., 114; Darr v. Burford, 339 U. S., 200. These are habeas corpus cases but the rule a fortiori would be applicable to the case at bar, if the constitutional question could be reached.

II.

COMPLAINT BELOW FAILED TO STATE A CLAIM AGAINST DEFENDANTS UPON WHICH RELIEF CAN BE GRANTED.

A. The Injunction in Force Against Lillian E. Snouffer and J. & L. Snouffer, Inc., an Ohio Corporation, Issued by the Court of Appeals of Franklin County is Valid Against This Plaintiff.

There is no question but that the face of the bill clearly discloses privity in interest between the new Delaware corporation, present lessee of the property of Lillian E. Snouffer of which she is president and therefore executive head, and her former lessee, the Ohio corporation of the same name. On the facts here the injunction against her and her previous lessee is clearly valid against this plaintiff under authority of Walling v. Reuter, Inc., 321 U. S., 671. At page 674 the court said:

> "The judgment rendered by the District Court determined, subject only to resort to the prescribed appellate review of the judgment, the right of the administrator to an injunction restraining the corporation and those associated or identified with it from violating the statute. Not only is such an injunction enforcible by contempt proceedings against the corporation, its agents and officers and those individuals associated with it in the conduct of its business, Wilson v. United States, 221 U. S., 361, 376, 377; 55 L. ed., 771, 777, 778, 31 S. Ct. 538, Ann. Cas. 1912D 558; cf. Re Lennon, 166 U. S., 548, 41 L. ed., 1110, 17 S. Ct., 658, but it may also, in appropriate circumstances, be enforced against those to whom the business may have been transferred, whether as a means of evading the judgment or for other reasons"

In support of the foregoing this court, among many other authorities, cited the case of Fertilizer Co. v. Ruh, decided by the Court of Appeals of Franklin county, 7 O. App., 430, the syllabus of which reads:

> "Where the property and business of a corporation is transferred to and accepted by a new corporation of the same name and with the same managing officers, an injunction issued and in force against the old company prior to and at the time of the transfer is binding upon the new company while managing the plant and property so acquired and engaged in the same or similar business thereon, although the order of injunction did not expressly include the officers, agents and assignee of the original company."

The Court of Appeals was entirely correct in sustaining the District Court on the ground of res judicata since the injunction of the state court carried over to the petitioner.

BLEED THROUGH POOR COPY

B. The Jurisdiction of the Court of Appeals of Franklin County Having Already Attached is a Continuing Jurisdiction and the District Court was Right in Not Taking Jurisdiction of the Subject Matter of this Action.

A final judgment of a court of equity enjoining a nuisance is a continuing process over which the court necessarily retains jurisdiction to give effect to its decree and to do equity. The rule is stated in headnote 5 of Santa Rita Oil Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization (Sup. Ct., Mont.), 116 P. 2d, 1012, 136 A. L. R., 757, as follows:

> "5. A final or permanent injunction is a continuing process over which the equity court necessarily retains jurisdiction in order to do equity, including the power to modify or vacate it if the law has changed or equity no longer justifies its continuance."

The action in the state courts enjoining the owner of this property, the president of this new Delaware corporation, and her former lessee corporation from conducting stone quarrying operations in this residential neighborhood, was an action dealing with specific property and was at least an action quasi in rem. The real question decided by the state courts was that this particular property, situated as it is in a residential neighborhood, could not be used as a stone quarry. The essential question decided was the use of this property as a stone quarry, not the particular person who so used it. The District Court was right in holding that the action has elements of both an action in personam and an action in rem, which we believe is to say that it is an action quasi in rem. Under such circumstances the District Court could not exercise jurisdiction over the res because the jurisdiction of the state court has already attached to it. In Kline v. Burke Construction Co.,

COPY BOUND TOO CLOSE IN CENTER

260 U. S., 226, 231, this court said quoting from B. & O. R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co., 57 C. C. A., 322, 19 Fed., 680:

> "It is settled that when a state court and a court of the United States may each take jurisdiction of a matter, the tribunal whose jurisdiction first attaches holds it, to the exclusion of the other, until its duty is fully performed, and the jurisdiction involved is exhausted * * * The rule is not only one of comity, to prevent unseemly conflicts between state courts and those of the United States it is something more. 'It is a principle of right and law, and therefore of necessity. It leaves nothing to discretion or mere convenience.' Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176, 28 L. ed 390, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355. The rule is not limited to cases where property has actually been seized under judicial process before a second suit is instituted in another court, but it applies as well where suits are brought to enforce liens against specific property, to marshall assets, administer trusts, or liquidate insolvent estates, and in all suits of a like nature. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co., 177 U. S. 51, 44 L. ed 667, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Merritt v. American Steel Barge Co. 24 C. C. A. 530, 59 U. S. App. 85, 79 Fed. 228. The rule is limited to actions which deal either actually or potentially with specific property or objects."

This same principle was followed by this court in U. S. v. Bank of New York and Trust Co., 296 U. S., 463, the court stating on pages 477 and 478:

> "The principle, applicable to both federal and state courts, that the court first assuming jurisdiction over property may maintain and exercise that jurisdiction to the exclusion of the other, is not restricted to cases where property has been actually seized under judicial process before a second suit is instituted. It applies as well where suits are brought to marshal assets, administer trusts, or liquidate estates, and in suits of a similar nature, where, to give effect to its jurisdiction, the court must control the property. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. 177 U. S. 51,

BLEED THROUGH POOR COPY

61, 44 L. ed. 667, 671, 20 S. Ct. 564. If the two suits are in rem or quasi in rem, so that the court must have possession or control of the res in order to proceed with the cause and to grant the relief sought, the jurisdiction of one court must of necessity yield to that of the other. Penn General Casualty Co. v. Pennsylvania, 294 U. S. 189, 195, 79 L. ed. 850, 855, 55 S. Ct. 386. This principle is applied in the discharge of the long recognized duty of this court to give effect to such 'methods of procedure as shall serve to conciliate the distinct and independent tribunals of the States and of the Union, so that they may cooperate as harmonious members of a judicial system coextensive with the United States.'" (Emphasis added.)

Of similar import is Princess Lide v. Thompson, 305 U. S., 456.

It is indisputable that the Court of Appeals of Franklin county must continue to have control of the res with respect to its use to grant the relief to which it found these neighboring property owners were entitled.

C. The Complaint Alleges No Change in Factual Conditions Upon Which to Base a New Action to Modify the Injunction.

There is no allegation in the complaint of any changed conditions in this residential neighborhood upon which a new action to vacate or modify the decree could be based, even if the District Court rather than the state court could be said to have jurisdiction of such new action. The action here is but an attempt to re-litigate the case on the identical facts. In the annotation on the subject of the power to modify a permanent injunction appearing in 136 A. L. R., 765, the following is said at page 770:

> "Where there is no change in the circumstances at all, and a modification of an injunction is sought upon the identical facts upon which it was issued, the courts have declined to modify it, sometimes stating that they had no jurisdiction whatever to modify their decree after the passing of the term. * * *

Likewise, upon the broad ground that a court, except as authorized by statute or by recourse to appropriate common-law procedure, is without authority to disturb its final judgment after the judgment term is ended, and that the inhibition of this rule applies no less to decrees in equity than to judgments rendered in actions at law, a motion to dissolve a permanent injunction was denied in State ex rel. Caplow v. Kirkwood (1938) — Mo. App. —, 117 S. W. (2d) 652, where the defendant moved to dissolve an injunction restraining him from engaging in certain professional activities without the plaintiff's consent, upon eleven alleged grounds, all of which purported to be addressed to the merits of the questions whether or not the injunction should have been granted in the first instance. However, the case does not conflict with the general rule, because the mere fact that the original decree was erroneous does not justify the exercise of the power of the court to modify an injunction, and because no change in the facts or the law was alleged."

III.

THE ISSUE, RAISED BY THE COMPLAINT AND MOTION OF DEFENDANTS BELOW, WAS RES JUDICATA ENTITLING DEFENDANTS-APPELLEES TO A DISMISSAL OF THE ACTION ON THAT GROUND.

A. All Relevant Facts Being Shown by the Complaint, Res Judicata Was Properly Raised by Motion.

In addition to the fact that this court is without jurisdiction over the subject matter of this action, the jurisdiction of the state court having first attached and such jurisdiction being a continuing jurisdiction, the issue sought to be raised between the parties herein by the bill of complaint is res judicata. While ordinarily this question is required to be specifically pleaded in an answer, there are some circumstances under which it has been held to be properly raised by motion to dismiss. The first headnote in the case of W. E. Hedger Transp. Corp. v. Ira S. Bushey & Sons, Inc., 92 Fed. Supp., 112, (1950) is as follows:

> "While Federal Rules of Civil Procedure specifically require that defense of res judicata be specifically pleaded in answer, and such defense is not mentioned by name as one of defenses which may be presented by motion, motion to dismiss complaint on ground of res judicata is proper, especially where judgments relied upon are ones which were rendered in very court which is asked to pass upon motion. Fed. Rules Civ. Proc. rules 12(b), 8(c), 28 U. S. C. A."

It should be noted that the foregoing case does not limit the right to raise the question of res judicata on motion to dismiss where the judgment relied upon was rendered in the same court which is asked to pass upon the motion, the court merely holding that under such circumstances the defense of res judicata may a fortiori be raised by motion. After citing the appropriate federal rules of civil procedure, the court said at p. 113:

> "However, it would be the utmost folly to construe the rules to forbid the assertion by motion prior to answer of a defense like res judicata, especially where the judgments relied upon are ones which were rendered in the very court which is asked to pass upon the motion. At the very least such a motion can be treated as a speaking demurrer within the spirit of the rules."

The above decision was appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Second Circuit, 186 Fed. 2d, 236, which stated this same principle as set forth in the second headnote:

> "2. The defense of res judicata should usually be pleaded, but where all the relevant facts are shown by the court's own records, of which it takes notice, an answer is not first required. Fed. Rules Civ. Proc. rule 8(c), 28 U. S. C. A."

In the case at bar all the relevant facts are shown by the bill of complaint itself of which this court takes notice just as it would of an earlier decision appearing in its own records. An answer under such circumstances is not first required to raise this defense.

B. There Being Privity in Interest in the Subject Matter, the Issue Raised is Res Judicata in All Courts.

The applicable rule is stated in 30 Amer. Jur., pages 908, 909, under the heading "Judgments Res Judicata" as follows:

> "Briefly stated, the doctrine of res judicata is that an existing final judgment rendered upon the merits, without fraud or collusion, by a court of competent jurisdiction, is conclusive of rights, questions, and facts in issue, as to the parties and their privies, in all other actions in the same or any other judicial tribunal of concurrent jurisdiction. * * *
> Under the rule firmly established in the United States, the doctrine of res judicata extends to judgments of all courts. The doctrine prevails whether the judgment involved is rendered by the same court in which the subsequent action is prosecuted, or by a court of independent or concurrent jurisdiction."

If it may be said that the parties here are not the same as in the state courts, there is no possible question but that there is clear privity in interest in the subject matter of the litigation; to wit, the property owned by Lillian E.

Snouffer, within the meaning of the doctrine of res judicata. On this point the text in 30 Amer. Jur., 957, Judgments, Section 225, headed "Persons included as Privies," reads as follows:

> "There is no generally prevailing definition of privity which can be automatically applied to all cases involving the doctrine of res judicata. Who are privies requires careful examination into the circumstances of each case as it arises. In general, it may be said that such privity involves a person so identified in interest with another that he represents the same legal right. It has been declared that privity within the meaning of the doctrine of res judicata is privity as it exists in relation to the subject matter of the litigation, and that the rule is to be construed strictly to mean parties claiming under the same title. Under this rule, privity denotes mutual or successive relationship to the same right of property, and there is privity within the meaning of the doctrine of res judicata where there is an identity of interest and privity in estate, so that a judgment is binding as to a subsequent grantee, transferee, or lienor of property. This is in harmony with the view that a judgment is binding on privies because they are identified in interest, by their mutual or successive relationship to the same rights of property which were involved in the original litigation." (Emphasis added.)

C. The Motion in the State Court of Appeals After Judgment.

The complaint alleges (p. 8a, appendix to appellant's brief) that when the Snouffers endeavored to modify or vacate the decree in injunction after term by a motion in the Court of Appeals, the court held that such action should be taken by a petition in the Common Pleas Court. This decision was not carried to the Supreme Court of Ohio. Appellant contends that the Common Pleas Court could not vacate the judgment of the Court of Appeals. The fact of the matter is that under the law of Ohio as held by the Court of Appeals in this litigation, that is exactly what the Common Pleas Court could do in a proper action based upon a change in the law or the material facts such as would justify a modification of the prior injunction decree. It was the decree of the Common Pleas Court which originally granted the injunction and which order was appealed. Appellant has not seen fit to pursue this remedy, which appellant has at any time, and which the Court of Appeals expressly held was available. She is merely attempting here to relitigate the same question on the same facts.

The facts or questions in issue and judicially determined by the state courts in this litigation are conclusively settled by the existing judgment so far as concerns the parties to that action and their privies, and this rule applies not only to what was determined but to every other question which might properly have been litigated in the case. Quinn, Auditor, et al. v. State ex rel., 118 O. S., 48; Southern Pacific Rd. Co. v. U. S., 168 U. S., 1.

IV.

JUDGMENT OF THE COURT OF APPEALS.

Petitioner comments upon the fact that the Court of Appeals sustained the District Court solely on the ground that the issue was res judicata and ignored the question of jurisdiction. This judgment of the Court of Appeals necessarily is based upon the fact that the District Court had no jurisdiction over the subject matter for the reason that there was no real diversity of citizenship and the plaintiff was bound by the decree of the state court, the jurisdiction of which had already attached as stated in the order of the District Court (Record, page 17a). The issue was accordingly res judicata as far as such plaintiff was concerned. The finding of the Court of Appeals that the issue raised is res judicata carries with it an affirmance of the District Court that the plaintiff is bound by the decree of the state court that the District Court had no jurisdiction over the subject matter and that the complaint failed to state a claim against the defendants upon which relief could be granted. The Court of Appeals wrote no opinion for the obvious reason that the soundness of the decision of the District Court was so apparent as not to justify an opinion.

BLEED THROUGH POOR COPY

V.

PETITIONER'S REASONS RELIED ON FOR ALLOWANCE OF THE WRIT.

Petitioner first contends that the decisions of this court in Smythe v. Ames, 169 U. S., 466, Hart v. Keith, etc., 262 U. S., 271, Swafford v. Templeton, 185 U. S., 482, declared it was error to dismiss a petition such as was filed in the District Court in this case. These decisions are no authority for such statement.

Smythe v. Ames related to fixing railroad rates and is not apposite.

Hart v. Keith held that jurisdiction is determined by the allegations of the bill, and cases should be decided on their merits unless the want of jurisdiction is entirely clear. In the instant case the want of jurisdiction is crystal clear.

Swafford v. Templeton involved an asserted wrongful refusal to permit plaintiff to vote for a member of the House of Representatives at a national election. It held that the question was essentially federal and recognized the bill must present a bona fide federal question. It likewise is not apposite.

The petitioner next says that the judgment of the Court of Appeals is in conflict with controlling decisions of this court in Wells Fargo v. Taylor, 254 U. S., 175; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S., 589; Ex parte Simon, 208 U. S., 141; Simon v. Southern Ry. Co., 236 U. S., 115; Pub. Serv. Co. v. Cosboy, 250 U. S., 153; Nat. Surety Co. v. State Bank, 120 Fed., 593.

The Wells Fargo case as well as the Marshall case, the case of Ex parte Simon v. Southern Ry. Co. all involve judgments obtained by fraud, which element is not present in the case at bar.

The Public Service Co. case held that a state officer may be enjoined from carrying into effect a state law which may be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States and is not relevent.

The National Surety Company case was an action to obtain relief from judgment in a state court on the ground that through mistake of a public officer of which he alone was responsible, judgment had been rendered without opportunity for putting up a defense and this when there was one which was both meritorious and complete. No such facts are present in the case at bar. This litigation was thoroughly and competently tried in all of the state courts.

Heading 3 of petitioner's reasons relied on for allowance of the writ has hereinabove been answered.

It is next contended that the Court of Appeals went outside of the allegations of the petition instead of being confined to such allegations. We have hereinabove pointed out that the complaint on its face disclosed that the issue is res judicata.

Under heading 5 of petitioner's reasons for allowance of the writ it is contended that the District Court erred in ignoring the action and prayer of petitioner for a declaratory judgment. Title 28, Section 2201 United States Code confers upon any federal court of the United States jurisdiction in declaratory judgment in cases of actual controversy within its jurisdiction. The statute is limited in its operation to those within the jurisdicton of federal courts. Sou. Pac. Co. v. McAdoo, 82 Fed. 2d 121; Garvica v. Donaugh, 93 Fed. 2d, 173; Cen. Mexico Lt. & Power Co. v. Munch, 116 Fed. 2d, 85. This action not being within the jurisdiction of the District Court, it was unnecessary to comment upon the prayer for declaratory judgment.

It is finally alleged that the judgment of the Court of Appeals in this case is in conflict with the decisions of this court in Mosher v. Phoenix, 287 U. S., 29; Cuyahoga R. R. v. Akron, 240 U. S., 462; Regan v. Farmers L. and Trust Co., 154 U. S., 362; Chicago v. Chicago, 166 U. S., 226; Near v. Nimes, ex rel., 283 U. S., 697.

The Mosher case was an original action in the District Court in which the complaint sought to enjoin the city from appropriating petition's land for street improvement, alleging that there had been no dedication of his land to the city and no proceedings for condemnation, resulting in an attempt to take his property without due process and without compensation. The court properly held that this presented a substantial federal question.

Cuyahoga Railway case came to this court by direct appeal and was another case involving the right of a city to take plaintiff's property and award compensation without instituting any proceedings to acquire such property.

The Regan case involved certain actions of the state railroad commissioners in fixing and enforcing unjust and unreasonable rates.

The Chicago v. Chicago case is authority for the elementary proposition that private property may not be taken even if authorized by statute without compensation.

The Near case was an appeal from a decision of the Supreme Court of Minnesota adjudging that publication conducted by defendant to be a nuisance and enjoining further like publication. The judgment of the state court was affirmed.

It is obvious that none of these authorities are in conflict with the decision of the District Court and the Court of Appeals in this case. The judgment of the state court is not one taking petitioner's property but is merely one of the hundreds of cases where the courts have enjoined the carrying on of an activity which amounts to a nuisance in a residential neighborhood. As stated by Judge Picard in the opinion of the District Court, "There are an unlimited number of cases in every state of the Union controlling nuisances. If, after every such decision a rehearing on the same facts can be held in the federal courts, then of what use are the state court decisions?"

CONCLUSION.

In conclusion, it is submitted that the decision of the Court of Appeals affirming the District Court in this case is entirely in accordance with the controlling decisions of this court hereinabove cited, discussed and relied upon, as well as the controlling decisions of other Courts of Appeals herein cited.

This litigation commenced in 1947, over six years ago. The question of whether or not stone quarrying operations could be carried on in this residential neighborhood on this property was litigated first, in the Common Pleas Court; second, in the Court of Appeals of Franklin county; third, in the Ohio Supreme Court; fourth, again in the Court of Appeals of Franklin county; fifth, in the United States District Court; and, sixth in the Court of Appeals. These neighboring property owners are now again brought into this court by Mrs. Snouffer's new lessee corporation of which she is president. As stated by the District Court, "there must come a time when litigation should terminate."

We submit that the petition for certiorari should be denied.

REPLY BRIEF OF PETITIONER.

Petitioner was admonished by the rules of this court (R., 38) and by the applicable decisions and all authorities on federal practice that on a petition for a writ of certiorari to the U. S. Court of Appeals, the court will consider only the "questions presented" by the petition. It was also settled, that argument on the merits was not to be tolerated. 304 U. S., 175, 177, 178, 82 L. Ed., 1273, 1275, Gen Talk v. West. Elec. Co.

Twenty-three pages of respondents' brief is devoted to an argument on the alleged merits as they construe the merits. Four pages are devoted to a discussion, as respondents construe it, of the alleged conflict, set forth under "petitioner's reasons".

No consideration whatever was given by respondents to "the questions presented", which this court declared it only will consider.

It was observed by a distinguished member of this court in 48 Harv. L. R., p. 269, on this matter:

> "That the element of importance lies in the fact of conflict rather than the nature of the issue."

The respondents reveal by their proposed analysis of the decisions cited under "reasons", that they consider only the facts involved, that is the issues, facts and merits of the cases cited, rather than the principle and ruling involved in the conflict.

They ignore or do not seem to comprehend that this action was a new and original suit in equity between individuals in the District Court as characterized by the U. S. Supreme Court in reported decisions, setting up facts, which it was and is contended involve the settled controlling principles of equity, applicable alike in all courts, federal and state, and which it was and is contended, renders the alleged judgment inequitable, unconscionable and subject to an injunction against enforcement by the individual respondents.

Also that a right created by the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution was set up and facts alleged, which show, if true, that the guarantees of such amendment were violated, rendering such judgment void.

Equity is a vast reservoir of principles, declared, established and settled by precedents, controlling rights, procedure, pleading, jurisdiction and relief and chancery courts are as much bound by them as law judges are by the law. Pomeroy Eq. Jur., Vol. 1, Sec. 47, 48, 987, 19 Amer. Jur., p. 313, Sec. 454. They are also bound by the Constitution of the United States, as exemplified in Bigelow v. Forrest, 9 Wall., 339, 351; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall., 163, 176, 178, 21 L. Ed., 872, 878, 879.

The United States Court in equity, is not limited in its relief as inferred by respondents in their argument under "reasons" to mere cases of "fraud".

This is conclusively established by the decision of this court in Simon v. South Ry. Co., 236 U. S., 115, 119, 122, 124, 125, 59 L. Ed., 492. The court said, p. 121, 236 U. S., p. 497, 59 L. Ed.: "The primary question is whether the United States court had jurisdiction of the case. This must be determined by the allegations of the bill." Then the court stated, to indicate that relief by injunction, as sought herein, was not limited to cases of fraud, which was present in 236 U. S., but will be applied, wherever and whenever, under the controlling established principles of equity, the alleged judgment was rendered inequitable, unconscionable and unenforceable, and whether valid or void, the court therein stated as follows, p. 125: "That other cases might be cited involving the same principle."

That is, where "Equity is found to exist appropriate relief is granted". That requires a hearing to determine on the merits. We contend we were denied a hearing on the merits under both the Fourteenth and Fifth Amendments to the United States Constitution (see R., p. 22, paragraph "2", petition for rehearing).

The over-reaching fundamental question involved in this case is the jurisdiction of the District Court under the petition of the petitioner and the error of the Court of Appeals in sustaining the order of the District Court which petitioner contends is in violent conflict with the decisions of this court. It is also in conflict with the decisions of the Court of Appeals on the question of the right to a hearing under the Declaratory Judgment statute (pp. 11-15, pet).

A labored argument, which petitioner does not believe has any place in their brief was made on the question of res judicata.

We call the court's attention to the decision in 234 Fed., 152, 156, 164, Landon v. Pub. Util. (p. 14, our petition), as follows:

> "It is not necessary to determine the question of res judicata in order to determine the question of jurisdiction of this court, because if he is not engaged in interstate commerce, still if these rates are non-compensatory, unreasonable under the Kansas statute, or if they are confiscatory, thus in violation of the Constitution of the United States, the jurisdiction still inheres."

If the facts alleged are sustained at a hearing, they show a violation of the U. S. Constitution, and jurisdiction "still inheres".

In conclusion we call the attention of the court and the respondents anew to the decisions of this court, Hart v. Keith, 262 U. S., 271, 273, 67 L. Ed., 977, 979; Levering v. Morrin, 289 U. S., 103, 105, 106, 77 L. Ed., 1062, 1064 (see p. 13, pet.), to the effect that:

> "If the bill makes a claim which if well founded is within the jurisdiction of the court, it is within that jurisdiction, whether well founded or not, and is not to be determined on the facts as they may turn out, or by a decision on the merits."

J. & L. SNOUFFER, INC.,

vs.

WILBUR B. ADAMS, ET AL.,
Respondents.

PETITION FOR REHEARING ON ORDER ENTERED NOVEMBER 9, 1953.

We were admonished, as we thought, not to argue the merits of the case, when the petition for a writ was filed herein. We refrained from doing so, but, since the respondents filed a brief giving most of their space to an argument on the alleged merits, and since, to our mind, this court may have been misled or misunderstood the position, claims, and rights of petitioner, we deem it our duty, right, and privilege to present this petition for a rehearing of the order of this court entered November 9, 1953.

It is the conviction of petitioner and its counsel, relying on the applicable controlling decisions of this court and of the United States Court of Appeals and upon the applicable controlling, established, fixed principles of equity, that this court, and the Court of Appeals have failed to comprehend or have misunderstood the scope, purpose, character and object of petitioner's petition and claims, resulting in a denial of a hearing on the merits of petitioner's action, guaranteed by the Fourteenth and Fifth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

In order to enable the court to understand the situation of petitioner, we believe it only fair and proper that this court should understand the background of this case.

J. & L. Snouffer, Inc., was a corporation engaged in the quarrying of limestone for road building and construction purposes, and for the manufacture, sale and distribution of limestone meal for soil construction and farming purposes.

It was organized by John M. Snouffer, and his son Lawrence L. Snouffer, the deceased husband of Lillian E. Snouffer. The corporation during the husband's lifetime operated a quarry for approximately 25 years on the west side of the Scioto river in Franklin county, Ohio, about two miles south of Dublin. The region was not a thickly settled region, neither was it zoned against quarrying. This was 16 miles north of the city of Columbus.

For almost a hundred years the region immediately north and south of the Snouffer quarry had been known as a quarry region, producing a high grade of limestone used in the manufacture of steel, road building, construction work and limestone meal for agricultural purposes.

The largest quarry operation in that region is under the corporation known as the Marble Cliff Quarries, which occupies about 1200 acres contiguous to the city of Columbus, Ohio, and on the west bank of the Scioto river opposite one of the most thickly settled and exclusive residential sections, immediately adjoining the city of Columbus about 2½ miles northeast of the heart of Columbus, Ohio.

The Snouffer quarry property comprises 67 acres, leased by Lillian E. Snouffer to the corporation and carved out of a 134 acre tract, owned by her. Lillian E. Snouffer individually never operated this quarry or any other quarry. The original Snouffer quarry property 2½ miles south of Dublin on the west side of the Scioto was practically exhausted before the death of Mr. Snouffer and he purchased the present site for the purpose of continuing its operations, 2 miles north of Dublin on the west side of the river. After he initiated that move, death removed him, precipitating the entire operation and development into control of Lillian E. Snouffer, through the corporation.

It was at that time and after the machinery had been moved to the new location, at great expense, which was not zoned against quarries, that respondents filed the suit in equity, seeking an injunction against the corporation and Lillian E. Snouffer from establishing or operating the quarry, or from blasting, quarrying or crushing stone on the premises. The quarry had not yet been established or in operation when the petition was filed. None of the respondents had been injured in any way. None of the property on the east bank of the river, where some of respondents lived, had been injured in any way. No invasion of any legal rights of any respondents had taken place or even alleged in respondents' petition. One of the respondents who owned 90 acres did not even have a building on his land.

Respondents herein alleged that the operation, if permitted, would cause this and that damage or injury and impair the value of their property. Upon that petition the case was tried and a permanent injunction was allowed. No other facts were alleged except at time of trial they alleged it had started operation.

There was no allegation in the petition or finding in the judgment entry of the Court of Appeals, of the existence or commmission of a nuisance or violation of any law or lawful regulation or any negligent operation or the invasion of any legal right of any respondent or of any constructive or actual appropriation of any property of any respondent herein.

The attorney for the Snouffer Co. died just after the trial and before the appeal was made to the state Court of Appeals. None of the present counsel were in the case when tried or on appeal in chancery.

None of the claims or facts set out in petitioner's petition herein, which it is contended establish the rights of petitioner herein, were present in the state court, either at the trial or on the appeal. This statement cannot be successfully controverted.

For instance, no contention was made at the trial or on appeal in the state court that under Sections 894-4-5, General Code, that the > "Jurisdiction to supervise the operation and development of all mines, quarries and oil and gas wells located in the state of Ohio"

was confided exclusively to the "Division of Mines, Department of Industrial Relations", and that to the Division of

BLEED THROUGH POOR COPY

Mines was delegated the power and the duty imposed, to

> "Make, publish and enforce necessary rules and regulations not incompatible with the mining laws of the state" for the purpose of protecting,

> "the health and safety of persons and the protection and conservation of property within or about or in connection with mines or mining and quarries, oil and gas wells in this state".

Neither was any claim set up under Sec. 1177-43, General Code, Ohio, that the quarry had been licensed for years for the manufacture, sale and distribution of limestone agricultural meal, a vital and indispensable element to soil and farming.

That therefore, the quarry business was legalized by statute and could not be enjoined as a nuisance per se as was done in this case, without violating the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. The controlling effect of that statute could not be waived.

It was and is the contention of petitioner that when the legislature, acting within its constitutional powers legislates on a subject matter and legalizes a business and provides for the supervision of the operation and development through a designated administrative body and delegates to such body power and imposes the duty of adopting necessary rules and regulations, for that purpose that such enactment establishes the public policy of the state and as stated in U. S. Trans. Mo. Frt. Ass., 166 U. S. 290, 340, 341, 41 L. Ed. 1007, 1027,

> "When the law making power speaks upon a particular subject over which it has constitutional power to legislate, public policy in such case is what the statute says."

By such enactment, the legislature as stated in St. Louis v. Atl. Quarry, etc., 148 S. W. 948, 950, 244 Mo. 479, 486, 485,

> "recognized their existence and continued existence of the subject matter to be regulated"

and the power to regulate, excluded the power to prohibit, and that if such an act was so construed as to prohibit, it would be declared unconstitutional.

244 Mo., 479, 485, 486, St. Louis v. Atl. Quarry, etc.:

> "The quarrying of rock is one of those things, as to which, the power to prohibit is carefully withheld. We do not have to go to the books to ascertain that it is not a nuisance per se. We see this in the wonderful excavations that contain so important a part of the commercial and industrial activities of some of the great cities of Europe and America; conditions to which even the judges of the courts cannot close their judicial eyes. We must take judicial notice of the immense underground terminals and subways in New York, excavated from solid rock, which has in its turn been made to serve the constructive purposes of the improvement as well as of the city which sits above them."

This same principle was substantially declared in Yates v. City of Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 499, 500, 19 L. Ed. 984, 986, wherein it was declared that a lawful business or structure "cannot arbitrarily be declared a nuisance" even by the legislature, "unless it in fact had that character. This would place every house, every business, and all the property of the city at the uncontrolled will of local authorities".

What applies to the legislative branch of the government and administrative authorities applies to the courts as declared in 166 U. S. 226, 233-235, 41 L. Ed. 979, 983-984.

It was and is the contention of the petitioner that under the applicable authorities all of this went to the want of jurisdiction of the state court.

BLEED THROUGH POOR COPY

It was the contention of the petitioner that under the facts alleged, and under the controlling established principles of equity that the state court had no jurisdiction to render the judgment it did render even though it had jurisdiction of the parties and the subject matter, that the judgment of the state court was in excess of the power and authority conferred by law and equity to render the judgment it did render, that such excess was a denial of due process of law and the equal protection of the laws and repugnant to the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. All of this is established by the authoritative decisions of this and other courts.

It is and was contended that this business being legalized by the legislature, that no court had any power to nullify that law directly or indirectly by depriving the petitioner of the lawful use of his property without compensation, that to do so, as was done in this case was a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. It is not contended that a court of equity, in a proper case has no jurisdiction to enjoin a nuisance in fact, arising from a violation of law or lawful regulation, or acts of negligence, where the right is established at law, and where the injury cannot be compensated in damages. But that was not this case, as revealed by the petition of respondents in the state court and by the judgment of the state Court of Appeals (pp. 3a-7a, R.).

It was contended that the petitioner, under its petition and the controlling applicable decisions of this court and the Court of Appeals that the District Court had jurisdiction and that petitioner was entitled to a hearing on the merits and opportunity to establish and prove its case, that to deny it such a hearing was a denial of due process of law and the equal protection of the laws repugnant to both the Fourteenth Amendment and the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

In 166 U. S. 226, 233, 235, 240, Chicago v. Chicago, 41 L. Ed. 979, 983, 984, 986, it was declared,

> "That a court, even with jurisdiction of the parties and the subject matter * * * might be its final judgment would be inconsistent with the Fourteenth Amendment" being "in excess of the power or authority to render that judgment".

Then said if compensation for private property taken for public use

> "is an essential of due process of law the judgment of a state court under the authority of which the property is taken is to be deemed the act of the state within the meaning of that amendment."

It was established in Regan v. Farmers, etc., 154 U. S. 362, 397, 399, 38 L. Ed. 1014:

> "It is part of the judicial function to determine whether the act of one party, be that of an individual or organized body, or public as a whole, operates to divest the other party of rights of property or person" guaranteed by the Constitution.

Page 410 the court said this amendment applies when an owner is deprived of the use of his property without compensation, as well as when deprived of the title to property.

The court further declared "That the power to regulate" as provided by the Ohio law is "not the power to destroy", p. 399, that the Fourteenth Amendment,

> "Forbids legislation * * * by which property of one individual is wrested from him and given to another without compensation under the Fourteenth Amendment". See Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 102.

BLEED THROUGH POOR COPY

It has been seen here that the act of the court, by a judgment rendered, in this very matter, and in this same case, "is the act of the state" the same as if it was the act of the legislature. 166 U. S. 226, 233-235, supra.

Under 185 U. S. 487, 291, 493-495, 46 L. Ed. 1003, 1007-1008, it was noted that an original case in equity, in the U. S. court, between individuals setting up a right created by the U. S. Constitution, is not to be confused with a case on appeal or error from a state court, relating to the same subject matter. The court said:

> "The distinction between the cases referred to and the one at bar is that which must necessarily exist between controversies concerning rights which are created by the Constitution or laws of the U. S. and which are consequently in their essence federal and controversies concerning rights which are not created by the Constitution."

Therefore under the applicable decisions of this court, as heretofore cited in our petition for a writ of ceriorari and in our reply brief, since, petitioner has set forth facts and a cause of action under the laws and the Constitution of the U. S. and the controlling principles of equity which was not present in the state court, the United States court had and has jurisdiction and petitioner under this court's own decisions has an indisputable right to at least a hearing, "whether the cause and case is well founded or not". That is a matter to be determined on a hearing.

State v. Clarke, 54 Mo. Rep. 17 34—cited in 244 Mo. 486:

> "The word regulate certainly implies the continued existence of the subject matter to be regulated"
> "To regulate commerce, are words found in our Federal Constitution, and which have received a judicial interpretation, and they certainly conceded that the commerce, concerning which Congress was allowed to make regulations was to be allowed under the same rules. It did not mean to annihilate or suppress or to prohibit under all and every circumstances. No regulations or rules are necessary concerning an evil absolutely prohibited."

This case involved a question relating to bawdy houses, which were absolutely prohibited. The court held that this special act involved was not controlled by that general law.

P. 36:

"It would be a novel exercise of judicial power to pass on the expediency of legislative enactments or matter outside of the province of the courts. The only question we have to decide is, whether the power existed to make the law and we think the legislature granted this power."

316 Mo. 492, 501, In re Rahn:

"The very highest evidence of public policy of any state is its statutory laws, and if there is legislation on the subject, the public policy of the state must be derived from such legislation. * * * It is a naked assumption to say that any matter allowed by the legislature is against public policy. The best indication of public policy is to be found in the enactments of our legislature."

On Wednesday, December 31, 1952, the Marble Cliff Quarries Company had a full page ad in Columbus papers, with pictures of massive manifold operations. It stated:

"Without limestone there will be no steel. Without steel there will be no civilization."

That company as it existed now started in 1913 and is not molested. The ad further stated:

"The importance of the quarry operations at Marble Cliff to the development, and under existing conditions, to the defense and wellbeing of this community and this country is quickly realized when one learns that approximately 800 pounds of limestone is required for the conversion of iron ore into each ton of pig iron and that additional quantities of limestone, either as stone or as burned lime, is required in the further processing of the pig iron into steel. Total requirements of limestone, used in making steel approaches if not exceeds, 50,000,000 tons annually. No other method of refining ore and finishing steel is extensively practiced by the industry."

"The use of limestone as a soil corrective and for the purpose of producing bigger and better food supplies is well known. The stone at Marble Cliff, when processed through drying and pulverizing plants, admirably supplies the deficiencies and corrective agencies necessary to bring Ohio soils to a state of high productivity. Thousands upon thousands of tons are taken from Marble Cliff each year for application upon Ohio farms. The rugged health of our citizens require lime."

The same company on Monday, November 23, 1953, had another full page ad in the Columbus papers extolling its services to the community and the indispensability of its products to the life of the community, the state and the nation. It is 11 miles nearer the city of Columbus and its operations involve, because of its magnitude, a multiplied incidents of its operations, as compared to the quarry of the petitioner located 11 miles further north of the city, along the same limestone region. Its incidents and methods of operation are identical with petitioner's.

If the petition and judgment in this case can stand and if the court had jurisdiction to enter this judgment upon that petition, then every quarry in Ohio can be enjoined.

Why should one quarry, in the very same region, enjoy a monopoly in the production and sale of a mineral, which it is contended is essential to our national life and civilization and another quarry in the same region be suppressed and destroyed and the use of its property destroyed, ostensibly just because it is small and the other big?

If the state court had no jurisdiction under equity and the United States Constitution to do what was alleged in the petition herein then there can be no dispute but that the District Court had jurisdiction and petitioner was entitled to a hearing. That obviously, can be determined, only by a hearing.

It would appear that only by disregarding all of the applicable authorities of this court and of the Court of Appeals, and the controlling, established principles of equity, going to the jurisdiction of the state court, and by treating this case as on appeal or error, and therefore res judicata, can the court, in our deliberate judgment, justify the denial of a hearing on this petition.

But to do that the court must go outside of the petition of petitioner in the District Court. But the federal courts have declared that cannot be done on a motion to dismiss. (See Stewart v. Masterson, 131 U. S. 151, 157, 33 L. Ed. 114; p. 15, pet., p. 33, R.)

Since a right in equity, going to the want of jurisdiction of the state court, and a right under the United States Constitution is clearly set forth, which were not present in the case in the state court, it would seem clear that the pronouncement of law laid down in 234 Fed. 152, 153, 154, Landon v. Pub. Util. (p. 4, our reply brief) should settle that question. Also Consold. Wyoming Co. v. Champion Mfg. Co., 62 Fed. 945 (p. 33, R.).

There can be no dispute but that a diversity of citizenship exists and that more than $3,000.00 is involved; and also that a substantial federal right and question is presented and involved.
